IN THE NEWS

Dairy Situation and Outlook

Milk prices continue well above year ago levels. The April Class III price was $24.42, and May will be near $25.00. The April Class IV price was $25.31 but May will be lower near $24.5. While volatile dairy product prices have held at levels to maintain Class III and Class IV prices near these levels. During the month or May cheddar barrel and cheese started the month at $2.34 per pound, got as low as $2.30, but has strengthened since then and is now $2.45. Forty-pound cheddar blocks started the month at $2.38 per pound, got as low as $2.2625, but has also strengthened since then and is now $2.3750. Dry whey prices continue to weaken. Dry whey started the month at $0.5750 per pound and is now $0.5025. Dry whey was as high as $0.86 per pound back in February. This drop in the value of dry whey has taken about $2 off the Class III price.
